

Cookies Policy

Manage cookies on your device?

To enhance user experience and personalize content, Finance Advice makes use of cookies. By browsing this website, you acknowledge and agree to the use of cookies. You have the ability to manage and control cookies via your web browser.

What are cookies?

Websites often place small text files, called cookies, on your computer when you visit them. These cookies play a crucial role in ensuring that websites function effectively and efficiently, and also provide website owners with valuable information. It is a common practice for most websites to use cookies.

What is a Cookies Policy?

A policy outlining the use of cookies on a website is known as a Cookies Policy. It provides users with detailed information about the various types of cookies used on the website, their purposes, and the measures users can take to control or prevent the placement of cookies on their electronic devices.

It's important to keep in mind that removing or restricting the use of cookies may have an impact on the user interface of the website and prevent access to certain components of the website.

How to disable cookies?

The majority of web browsers offer options to view, remove, and restrict cookies from websites. It's important to keep in mind that deleting all cookies may result in a loss of settings, including the ability to block cookies, as this requires the placement of a specific cookie on your device.

We utilize the following categories of cookies on our website:

- Required cookies - these are essential for the website's basic functionality, allowing you to access secure parts of the site and perform basic functions.
- Analytical/service cookies - these collect data on how frequently and in what manner the website is used, as well as which search tools and user groups are most common. These cookies may also provide statistics through third-party sources.